

Rachelle Taylor

Musician, Writer, Translator

Rachelle has enjoyed a long and successful career as a performer and musicologist (harpsichord and Renaissance music), and writer/translator. She occupied positions of importance, coordinated large-scale international events, and led internationally-recognized research projects in her field. Rachelle is a natural leader, a perfectionist who will always deliver on timeliness and quality.

Rachelle's experience as a purveyor of linguistic services in a variety of cultural and humanities-related disciplines goes back three decades. She has authored peer-reviewed books and articles, edited, reviewed, and critiqued a whole range of publications and documents, from books to websites and everything in between. She has an extensive knowledge of institutions of learning and governance, and of academic writing.

Above all, Rachelle Taylor loves crafting the best possible version of any document in any field, with the aim of getting its message across loud and clear!